Last week 12 innocent people lost their lives to a random shooting by an employee at the Municipal Building #2 in VA Beach. It seems like that has been the main focus of news, social media, conversations and so much more this week. When they went to work that day, they had no idea it would be their last. Many had plans for the weekend, family to see, birthdays to celebrate and the list will continue. But in an instance their life was taken and they stepped into their eternity.

Let us continue to pray for the families of these people. Let us love each other and bind together to share the love of Jesus like we never have before. We have what the hurting world needs Jesus!

“A Place Called Heaven!”

When it comes to life after death, there is only one absolutely credible source. His name is Jesus Christ!

With the cross on His horizon, Jesus talked candidly about His death and what lay beyond. He said, “In my Father’s house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also” (John 14:2-3).

The word which Jesus used to describe this place which we call heaven was a Greek word, topos. A study of that word in the Bible indicates that writers never used it to describe a make-believe, fantasy “pie-in-the-sky-in-the-sweet-by-and-by” sort of place. Our English word topography comes from the same source. To my knowledge, the word always referred to an actual, literal place.

On numerous occasions I have heard of people visiting Bethlehem, bowing low to enter the Church of the Nativity, going down the narrow stair case to a lower floor where a silver 14- pointed star marks the probable place or grotto where Jesus was born. That precise spot is a real place that still exist and can be travelled to today.

Galilee, where Jesus spent much of the time during His earthly ministry, is also a real and beautiful place. The synagogue built in the third century on the site of the synagogue where Jesus read the Scriptures long ago is an actual geographic site which can also be visited today.

In the Upper Room, with the cross on the horizon, Jesus told the disciples that He was going to prepare a place for them so that where He would be, they, too would be as well. He said, “Where I am, there you may be also.” If you can accept the fact that even now Jesus is in the presence of His father, that’s where we, too, will be when we cross heaven’s threshold.

“Heaven,” said Harry Ironside, “is Jesus, spelled out in large letters.

“But I’ve never been there,” you may say. There are many places in the world I’ve never been, but that, of course, doesn’t mean they are not real. So is it with heaven.

And what kind of a place is this? John, the Apostle whom Jesus loved, who could be described as Jesus’ best friend, had a vision, and he described heaven in terms of what is there and what is not there. in Revelation 21 & 22. It is defined by both what’s there and what’s not there.

C. S. Lewis wrote, “It is since Christians have ceased to think of the other world that they have become so ineffective in this one.” Think about it!

On the grace journey together with you, Lynwood

With Jesus I Can Make It...

“That day when evening came, he said to his disciples, ‘Let us go over to the other side.’”(Mark 4:35)

Jesus gets into a boat with his disciples and tells them, “Let’s go to the other side.” They are on their way when all of a sudden, a squall comes up, and the waves begin to rock the boat so violently that even the disciples who are fishermen and thus accustomed to rough waters, begin to fear for their lives.

Through all this, Jesus is asleep on the boat! So they awaken him and ask him if he doesn’t care that they might drown. The Lord gets up and rebukes the wind and the waves as if he were talking to a person. Then he asks his disciples a poignant question, “Do you still have no faith?” He may be asking us the same question today.

For some of us, crossing to the other side could represent a season in our lives with decisions and adjustments to be made as we are going to school or getting married or beginning work in a profession. Getting to the other side could also represent a year in our lives; perhaps it’s a difficult year filled with the pain of illness or the death of a loved one.

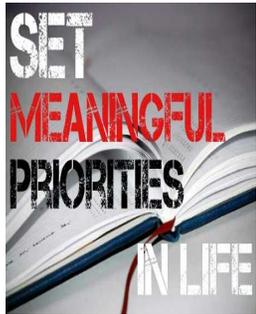

It could even be just a day in our lives when we are facing an exam in school, a job interview, office layoffs, or test results at a doctor’s office. And in all of this, we may wonder if we’ll make it to the other side.

The thing is that life has unexpected turns where a storm can come up without warning and, all of a sudden, we’re in trouble. And at times we also feel as those disciples felt: “Lord, don’t you care that we’re about to drown?”

Jesus challenged the disciples, asking them if they had no faith. Notice that the Lord wasn’t questioning their faith for not having spoken to the storm themselves, just as he had done. Only Jesus could have done that. In fact, this was one of the attesting miracles, which proved the divinity of Jesus, for only God has power over the wind and the waves.

So why did Jesus admonish his disciples? He admonished them for their fear, and for believing that they would drown even though Jesus himself was in the boat! He wanted them to know – and he wants each of us to know – that if he is in the boat, the boat is making it to the other side.

Yes, there will be trouble, and the storms can really get frightening at times, but those storms aren’t catching the Lord by surprise, and he is going to take us safely to the other side!

Setting Our Priorities

What is it about human nature that makes us looms? So often we coast in our relationships until they skid into a crisis. We think nothing of spending thousands on a car and blindly drive it by the homeless shelter every day. We think nothing of a sixty-hour workweek but can't find time for dinner as a family.

We live lives of loneliness and sorrow because those things that could build our friendships, family, and faith get our leftover time. Then, one day it is too late, we have waited too long.

We are like the Rabbi who did not run to Jesus until the crisis hit and his daughter was “at the point of death.” The Greek word here for this moment of “final desperation.”

Take a moment to examine your life today. What is at the “eschatos” – the point of death – in your life right now? What part of your spiritual or relational life is barely breathing?

Find ways to make those areas (family, friendships and faith) a higher priority than career and income. Do something different this week – Intentionally set apart regular time with God, schedule an appointment with those in your own family. Then, after prioritizing God and your family, then set up the rest of the week.

The Last Impression

One day God was walking through the Garden of Eden. After a short while, he came across Adam. Adam was in low spirits this particular day, and God asked him what was wrong. Adam told the Lord that he was lonely.

God responded that He would create Adam a companion. She would walk by his side for all eternity. She would listen to his problems. She would wash his clothes. She would keep his house clean. She would cook his meals. She would do anything to keep him happy. Most importantly, she would never complain or nag him.

To this Adam was ecstatic. His spirits lifted immediately. The Lord hated to tell him that this creature would come at a price. God told Adam that the creature would cost him an arm and a leg.

Adam responded, “What can I get for a rib?” ... And the rest is history.

What really makes for a happy life? A dream job, a bigger house, or a new relationship? If you're always hungry for the next big thing, but frustrated because it never seems to satisfy, you might be Chasing Carrots. It's time to hop off the treadmill and chase after something real.

This five-week series is about things people commonly chase after that only bring fleeting happiness, fulfillment, or validation—things like fame, achievements, perfectionism, approval or comfort... Plan now to invite a friend!
